

Premier League preview: Stoke City v Wigan Athletic

Contributed by Rob Jones
Last Updated Friday, 15 May 2009

STOKE City go into their final home game of the season against Wigan without the worries of a relegation dog fight.

After securing top flight football at Hull last week the Potters can relax and enjoy the atmosphere at the Britannia Stadium against Steve Bruce's men.

Despite the comfortable position Stoke find themselves in, manager Tony Pulis has been keen to stress that his side must finish the season on a high.

Should Stoke win tomorrow it would be their tenth home win of the season, with the likes of Villa, Arsenal and Spurs already beaten at the Britannia.

They face a Wigan side who pushed Manchester United all the way in midweek, but Stoke could move ahead of Steve Bruce's side with a win.